Alphabetical Index of Occupational Titles

The index of the National Occupational Classification (NOC) is an alphabetical listing of approximately 25,000 occupational titles. Each title is accompanied by the 4-digit code of the NOC unit group in which it is classified. The classification structure (major, minor and unit groups) begins on the following page. Descriptions of the unit groups are included in the separate publication, National Occupational Classification: Occupational Descriptions.

Scope of the Index

All occupational titles cited as example titles in the NOC unit group descriptions are included in the index, as well as thousands of additional titles.

Approximately 16,000 of these titles have been carried forward from the previous classification, the Canadian Classification and Dictionary of Occupations (CCDO). These are titles considered to be still in use. Additional titles were obtained during the various occupational research studies conducted for the NOC.

To assist users, the index includes both formally recognized occupational titles (for example, radiography technologist) and less formal titles that are in common usage (x-ray technician).

Some titles are "occupations" (for example, librarian; chef), while others are "specializations" (music librarian; pastry chef). Still others represent a range of jobs (furniture assembler; sawmill machine operator).

Inversions

Occupational titles appear in the index both in natural order (travel agent) and in inverted order (agent, travel). To facilitate the location of particular occupational titles, many inversions have been included.

However, when an occupational title is modified in several ways (criminal lawyer, tax lawyer and real estate lawyer) and all forms of the title are classified in the same NOC unit group, the index includes the modified titles in natural order and the generic title (lawyer) but does not include all the inversions. When the modified titles are classified in different NOC unit groups (chemical engineer, civil engineer and industrial engineer), inversions are included in the index to assist users in finding the appropriate unit group from the range of choices.

Restrictive Modifiers

Industry or subject matter modifiers are attached to many titles. This information is added to the title following a dash (customer service supervisor - retail; electrical mechanic - avionics) or a comma (design technologist, drafting; buffer, stone products). These modifiers should be considered when coding an occupational title.

Military Titles

Titles of military occupations are indicated by adding the modifier "military" after a dash (sonar operator - military) except in a very few cases where "military" appears in the title itself (military police officer; military engineering officer, civil).

When a military occupation includes more than one NOC unit group, the title has been given a restrictive modifier in brackets as well as the "military" modifier [medical officer (general practitioner) - military; medical officer (specialist) - military].
